Case 2:16-cv-02148-GMN-VCF Document 32 Filed 03/20/17 Page 2 of 2

The parties have proceeded with conducting discovery but are in agreement that the costs for retaining the various experts needed in this complex case will continue to accumulate at a fast pace, whereas the discovery costs could potentially become more manageable based on the outcome of Defendants' pending motion to dismiss. Because Plaintiffs have asserted eleven separate claims for relief, the parties respectfully request that discovery and the dispositive motion deadline be stayed until it is clear what claims are going to survive the pleading phase, so that no further costs are expended on potentially unnecessary discovery.

This is the parties' first request to stay discovery. The parties bring forth this request in good faith and not for the purpose of delay. It is important to note that a trial date has not yet been set in this case, and as such, the trial will not need to be postponed due to the requested stay.
